Fire destroyed the barn at the home of Mr. A. P. DeWolf on Monday of last week, together with all its contents, including a valuable horse, hay, grain, wagon and spraying machine. The News could not learn the origin of the fire nor the total amount of the loss, but did learn that it was heavy and that there was no insurance. Mr. DeWolf lives on the Como road, and has a magnificent grove and a delightful home. Last winter he was one of the few men in this section who lost his entire crop by the cold, and that loss was said to be lanta last week, Thursday, and the family fully $6,000. Misfortunes certainly did not come singly in his case. He will have in this as in the first loss the sincere sympathy of all the people here.

The News has had an interesting letter rom Mrs. Edwin Gilbert, who this week goes to her home in Georgetown, Conn., from New York. Mrs. Gilbert tells of a most enjoyable winter spent in Florida, much of the time at Daytona, but not the least enjoyable of which was her short visit to Crescent City where she met so many old friends. She states that if she comes to Florida again she will spend more time here-provided we can have better roads. WHEN

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

For years William Strong was the village cooper. He was called Bill by old and young. He was lazy and good natured. He had been married, but his wife had divorced him, and he kept house by himself in the rear end of his cooper shop. Bill had never been known to argue. He had never made a speech. He had never taken any interest in local matters. He had just made barrels and kegs and been Bill Strong. One evening when the usual crowd had assembled at the grocery and postoffice Mr. Strong turned Fowlerville upside down. Without having given a hint of his intentions he mounted the horse block and began a

In the suburbs of the village dwelt

Mrs. Henderson, widow, forty years old. Her husband had left her a poor old house and five acres of land. There were a cow and a horse, and by hiring the horse out by the day and renting most of her land and making her own garden she had managed to get along after a fashion. Bill Strong's speech was all about the widow. It was an appeal rather than a speechan appeal to the manhood and charity of his listeners. That's what knocked the breath out of the crowd. As Fowlerville had known Bill Strong, a dozen people might have been starving to death any time and he would have taken no interest. The speaker painted the picture of a lonely widow, a grieving widow and a hard up widow. It was a case worthy of any man's charity. It had brought tears to his eyes and a sadness to his heart.

Spring was here, the speaker continued. Four out of five of the widow's acres ought to be planted to corn and potatoes. He had no money, but he would give three days' work. Who would furnish the seed, who do the plowing, who work with him at the planting? Here was a missionary field at home. It was because Bill Strong made the appeal in such a surprising way that the crowd took hold. In five minutes all was settled. Next day the widow's acres were being plowed, and within three days the planting had been finished.

Bill Strong had a second appeal ready. He mounted the same horse block and thanked his colaborers in the name of charity and then proceeded to say that the widow's house was old and the roof leaked. As she sat there in her loneliness the water dripped down on her grieving head. He had no money, but he would give his work if others would give the shin-gles and nails. Others did so, and a brand new roof appeared. Then came the third appeal. Why not paint the old house and make it match the newness of the roof? Two coats would be the thing, and such was the enthusiasm that one of the merchants insisted on being one of the brush wielders. There was an old fence in front of the house. Bill Strong made no appeal about that. He didn't have to. Others saw the need, and a new fence was built. A new roof was also put on the cow shed and the well provided with a pump. Fowlerville enthused from top to bottom.

They presented the widow with dishes, carpets and furniture and gave her of their wardrobes. They clubbed their pin money and bought her a sewing machine. The Sunday school scholars bought the old horse a new harness and a stack of hay for their share. The Young Ladies' Literary club discovered that the widow's cow was on her last legs with old age, and the animal was sold to the butcher and a young one purchased. Never did so many gifts reach a widow's bands. She was somewhat in debt, and the Young Men's Athletic club insisted on paying them. So many actions, calling for so many tears, kept her eyes bothered to mend the huge holes in red and swollen all the time, while Bill Strong was looked upon with more awe and admiration than if he had won the welterweight champion ship of the world. By the time all these good things had been done it was time to hoe the corn and potatoes and weed the garden. Fowlerville turned out en masse for that. It was made a sort of legal boliday, and over a hundred men and women turned out to make a picnic of the work. Those who didn't turn out furnished the lemonade and sandwiches for dinner. When the hoeing and weeding had been finished men and women agreed that there was abounds in prehistoric remains, and in nothing more to be done.

But Fowlerville made one more rally. It raised a clear hundred dollars from the vast quantities preserved bein cash and placed the purse in the low the surface. hands of the widow. She had shed many, many tears, but she squeezed out a few more.

Next morning the town beheld Bill Strong moving his few household goods out of his cooper shop. He had busy air about him. He also had a changed look. When he had gone to you a clothing store and priced a twenty ticket some one made bold to ask:

"Well, Bill, is everything all right?" "Right as right," was the hearty re "You seem to be a busy man this

A CITY OF DANGERS.

Going Out at Night In Mosul Means Imperiling One's Life.

Mosul, on the western bank of the Tigris, is described in "The Short Cut to India," by David Fraser, as a place of some difficulty for the residents, Prices of every mortal thing are dearer than anywhere else in Turkey. Water is procured only from the Tigris, and every drop required must be carried therefrom in skins upon donkeys. Two pounds a month is a very ordinary expenditure on this essential and provides but a scanty bath.

To go out at night is to place one's life in jeopardy. To walk across the bridge in broad daylight is a danger owing to the frailty of the structure. The bridge is a wonderful affair and yields an income of some thousands of pounds annually to the contractor who farms it from the government. Three hundred yards of it is solid masonry and the remaining 150 yards a wooden platform laid upon a row of crazy boats.

Where the bridge of boats abuts the shore at one end and the stone bridge at the other are the points of danger, for owing to the height of the river when I was there the joinings were at a slope of forty-five degrees and con-The women came to do their part. sisted of narrow gangways up which people, sheep, cattle, donkeys, mules. horses and camels had to scramble. No wonder there were many fallings into the water-dangerous water, too for it coursed like a cataract between the boats and swirled and boiled in flerce eddies and whirlpools below the bridge.

One poor Zabtle, with rifle slung and bandoliers strapped across his chest. was walking across when his horse slipped at the ascent to the boat part of the bridge, and both fell into water. The horse was rescued, but the man was drowned. Life has small value in Mosul, however, and nobody the bridge or to make its passage less precarious.

A Hard Lct.

Nicaragua has been distinguished even among Central American republics by the number of its revolutions. Discovered by Columbus, it takes its name from the chief who ruled it at the time of its exploration by Doirla. in 1522. Of its earliest rulers it has been said that "the first had been a murderer the second a murderer and rebel, the third murdered the second, the fourth was a forger and the fifth a murderer and rebel."
